Comment: This is an absolutely appalling idea for development. It is completely out of place with the area and completely unnecessary. The area does need redeveloping but in a subtle way that is harmonious with the area. 97 apartments and an 84-bedroom hotel on the site of the former Jolly Boatman and the car park next to Hampton Court Station is not at all harmonious. The traffic in the area is already at a standstill on most days. This would bring the roads to a halt and have a huge negative effect on the local economy as well as schools. A hotel is not needed as most people come for the day and do not stay. There are already plenty of vacancies in existing local hotels so the hotel would soon be redundant.

The development itself is over the top. It is aesthetically completely out of context with the historical surroundings and would build up an area which would ruin a much loved area.
